You Can Become a Network Correspondent

The Integrity Media Network has a group of financial supporters that we call Network Correspondents. They play a vital role in sharing the greatest story ever told.

Our Network Correspondents' monthly tax-deductible gifts to this organization make it possible for us to "impact the Influencers" in several ways:

Personal Discipleship Program

On-line book and Bible studies

Sunday Morning Surveys

Marriage Conferences

Motivational Talks

Men's Retreats

Board of Directors

Garry Gupton

Television Host
Play-by-Play Broadcaster

Mitch Barnhart

University of Kentucky Athletic Director

Dan Migala

Director
Northwestern University
Graduate School of Business

The Integrity Media Network, along with its Network Correspondents, encourage media professionals and other people of influence to be men and women of integrity at work and home.

A Call to Integrity

It looks glamorous.

Those people who read to us the news of the day, or have their bylines published in bold type in newspapers and magazines, seem to have “dream jobs.”

But those competitors in the high-pressure world of journalism might confess to you that their dream job is most of the time a draining job.

Being the first one to know what’s going on in our world is intoxicating. However, gaining that knowledge comes at an extremely high price.

Journalism demands the professional’s undivided attention. The news beast must be constantly fed, and it eats a lot, even on holidays and weekends.

Every journalist knows what it’s like to be awakened in the middle of the night, ordered to dash off, and get the news on-the-air, on-the-web, and into print. Those demands ignore vacations, days-off, and long planned family outings.

During my three decades in TV news, my wife Terrie often referred to herself as “a single parent who is married.”

While I was on assignment watching other kids play ball and writing stories about their exploits, my wife sat alone in the stands as our children competed in basketball, swimming and golf.

When the family gathered for dinner, or when the children were being tucked into bed, I was miles away scrambling to beat another TV newscast deadline--and hoping I didn’t get beat on the big story of the day!

It cost me 20 years and thousands of missed memories before learning that it’s possible to accomplish career goals without losing my family in the process!

Once I reordered my priorities through an authentic relationship with Jesus Christ, I began to enjoy success as a journalist, husband, father and friend!

The Integrity Media Network understands these challenges are not limited to those who work in the media.

Join us as we encourage and equip people of influence to balance their professional goals with their personal dreams.

Impact the Influencers

The Integrity Media Network seeks to share the love of Christ with those who carry great influence in our society. As an example, media, coaches and golf professionals impact thousands everyday. Yet there is a spiritual void in all these professions.

“As Christians who work in the media, we get a chance to touch the lives of countless people on a daily basis and influence those lives by the spirit with which we live ours.”

Rudy Kalis, Sports Anchor
WSMV-TV

“Those of us in the golf profession seem to have everything: We’re making good money. We are doing a job we love. People would kill for this job. But the one thing missing is the spiritual component. It’s really needed in this business.”

Barry Bonifield
2008 Kentucky Senior PGA Champion

“We (coaches) compete against each other all the time. It would be great to get together without worrying about wins and losses and study the word of God”

Chris Renner, Coach
1999 Kentucky High School Basketball Champions

“The Integrity Media Network is a ministry who’s time has come. The Gospel of Jesus Christ will be proclaimed in word and deed by those in positions of influence...”

Stan Miller, In-Car Camera Operations
Indy Racing League
